

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Jul. 15, 2002

Nations Worldwide use ROCKY as Military Intelligence Tool- ROCKY units now supporting German military forces in the war against Terrorism in Afghanistan

Arcadia, CA -- July 15, 2002 -- Supporting German forces in Afghanistan, AMREL's ROCKY line of fully rugged computer systems is utilized within government and military operations by American, Swedish, German, Belgian and Austrian forces. These and other governments worldwide have chosen the ROCKY for its rugged properties and its ability to function both as a traditional notebook or fixed-mounted computer and as a specialized tool used for functions such as radar detection and wireless communication.

ROCKY is most commonly purchased by military customers in notebook Configurator, mounted in military jeeps or other vehicles and used in conjunction with specialized hardware and software (such as GPS (global positioning system) and wireless communication equipment) to maximize its abilities to gather and process relevant information and function as a communications tool. When equipped with the right combination of hardware and software, the ROCKY can be used for anything from battlefield management to navigation to wireless communication.

Currently classified in Sweden as official military equipment, AMREL's ROCKY has increasingly become the system of choice within militaries worldwide. "The ROCKY line has achieved, and continues to achieve success within the military market as a direct result of an innovative central design focused on system durability, expandability, and ease of use. This design allows for a great variety of product customization options, which has enabled our military customers to pair our systems with the equipment necessary for their specific operations," said Linda Talcott, AMREL Director of Corporate Communications. Contact AMREL's Federal Computer Group for all Government/Military sales support.

Marketing Contact:
Anthony Visnjevic , Marketing Coordinator
Phone: 800-882-6735
anthonyv@AMREL.com

ROCKY is a registered trademark of AMREL Systems, Inc.